

52 weeks of cleveland

565

A YEAR IN THE LIFE OF CLEVELAND

sunday, april 11, 2010

Cinema Wasteland

The stand out merch table for me and many other had to have been Cleveland's own Jeff Hartz. Jeff owns buzz-works which does some pretty sweet Gothic art and collectible stuff. He also scored the creepy Zombie Influx CD which is a must for anyone that is looking for that creepy Halloween background music. Jeff has a voice you can't mistake and he does the Public Service Announcements on the CD that add to the overall vibe of creepy. The premise is a full on Zombie invasion with eerie layers of atmospheric soundscapes coupled with the occasional frantic PSA's of a world taken over by the dead. It takes creepy to a whole new level with the help of long time horror music collaborators Joseph Vargo and William Piotrowski of Nox Arcana. This is no cutesy Monster Mash thing. This is a balls out creep-fest. Aside from the horror scores Jeff has some great handmade mask work along with your general freaky gargoyle, monster, and horror sculptures. He is super affordable too and well worth checking out.

52 weeks of cleveland's fan box

52 Weeks of Cleveland on Facebook

share it

about me

Jason Burchaski

Self proclaimed Urban Zen Master, so called restaurant critic, bar crawl champion, movie mogul, concert aficionado, music snob, tragically hipper than thou, artiste, photographer, poet, former Cleveland child star, deity to some but asshole to most giving my take on what life in Cleveland is all about. Taking in the sites, the sounds and all that abounds in this city on the lake they call Cleveland. Dining, shopping, sight seeing, concert going, music, art and life in a city where many say there is nothing to do. 52 Weeks is a take on Cleveland off the beaten path to experience what this city has to offer in food, music, and the arts.

View my complete profile