

Nox Arcana - Transylvania

(Nox Arcana / Monolith Graphics) Total Time: 55:45

"Beware ye who dare to venture where angels fear to tread..."

And thus, my journey begins to the dark mountains that lie beyond this barren land, long forgotten by human God. The desolate castle that stands atop the hill, only a sign of the eternal suffering that has swept this land through centuries past, invites me to be a part of this ferocious tragedy, called Transylvania...

...His hand, I see it, it guides me through this darkness, as I cry out "be gone light"!

NOX ARCANA invites you to embark on a darkly erotic musical journey to a barren land, where the children of the night never cease to quench their savage hunger for human life. From the beginning 'til the very end, the dark orchestrations and haunting melodies and rhythms will transport you straight into the land of the undead, only to bear witness to the massacre that takes place every unholy night. "Venture forth...if you dare"!

This is an EXCELLENT and STUNNING piece of musical ingenuity that pays homage to the dark mastermind called Bram Stoker. It successfully manages to satisfy even the most demanding of listeners. An album that stands as a landmark in the gothic-horror- instrumental genre...

Reviewer: Spyros Papadakis

Rating: 🍌🍌🍌🍌🍌

Added: March 30th 2006

Views: 442

[Back to Reviews Index |